PHILADELPHIA,

FRIDAY EVENING, DECEMBER 21.

TO THE
LEGISLATURE of PENNSYLVANIA

GENTLEMEN,

UNDERSTANDING that you are preparing to enter upon the consideration of a law for the future prevention of the Yellow Fever, which has of late years proved so destructive to the lives and interest of Philadelphia, and other commercial towns in the Union, and having had some experience, and read much on the subject, (not for the purpose of disputation and signalizing myself or party, for I reprobate every thing resulting from such unwarrantable motives) but from a sincere desire of divesting a subject from the ambiguity in which different views have involved it) I beg leave to submit to your attention and disposal such facts and arguments as have convinced me that the disease has heretofore been introduced into this country by imported contagion, and has never been derived from any impurity of the air of our climate, though I admit that the air of populous cities in the Summer and Autumnal seasons has a tendency to render the contagion more active, and to favor the propagation of the disease.

I am, Gentlemen,
With all due respect,
Your most obedient humble servant,
A REGIMENTAL SURGEON.

A SKETCH
Of Facts and Arguments in proof of the Yellow Fever, being of Foreign, and not of Domestic Origin.

THOUGH the Yellow Fever had been more or less epidemic in Philadelphia, four times before the year 1793—viz. in 1699, 1741, and in 1762, the Physicians residing in Philadelphia at the time of its appearance in 1793, were entirely unacquainted not only with its nature, but with any appropriate method of cure. Some considering it as a putrid, others as an aggravated form or variety of the common bilious or fall fever. Though the improvements which had been made in different parts of the city were acknowledged by all to have rendered it less infested with bilious fevers than formerly. Upon comparing its symptoms however with the description given of the Yellow Fever in the West-Indies, it was soon discovered to be the Yellow Fever, and this was more fully confirmed by its subsequent and almost unexampled mortality. Its contagious nature, as well as many of its symptoms distinguished the Yellow Fever from the bilious fever.

In the most dangerous cases of the Yellow Fever, the fever is constant for the first three or four days, and then ceases entirely to outward appearances for some hours, during which interval the patient feels easy and tranquil, but the fever again returns with new and aggravated symptoms—a yellowness of the eyes and skin, incessant vomiting, at first of various matters, but before its fatal termination a dark coloured mixture resembling coffee grounds, and in some cases as black as ink. The inflamed and watry appearance of the eyes at the beginning of the disorder also distinguished it from the Bilious fever, as well as the short period of its duration, and the malignity of its symptoms, in which it bears a much nearer resemblance to the true Plague.

But the Yellow Fever does not differ from the Bilious or Fall fever of this climate, only in the circumstance of contagion, and the aspect and severity of its symptoms; it differs from the Bilious fever also in the circumstance of being aggravated and rendered more certainly mortal by some of the remedies that are most efficacious in the cure of Bilious fevers, particularly by the Peruvian Bark and Laudanum.

These fevers also occur, and are most prevalent in different situations. Bilious fevers occupying chiefly, the Suburbs of cities and extensive tracts of marshy and level country—while the Yellow Fever is almost exclusively confined to cities and towns, and especially occupies those parts that are most populous and thickly settled. The Yellow Fever has also always been observed in this city near some particular wharf or vessel, or in some lodging house appropriated to seamen, as in some families whose business leads them much among vessels. Like most other contagious diseases it spreads from family to family, and from one street to another as the inhabitants have more or less communication with one another—Hence it is evident that its cause, or the seeds which give it birth are not, like the effluvia of mud and putrid vegetables, (which give origin to bilious fevers) diffused abroad in the atmosphere. When Bilious fevers occur, people are affected in different parts of the same district at the same time, or within a few days of each other, at least the majority of those that live alike and breathe the same air, some in the east, some in the west, and some in every quarter. Does the yellow fever makes its progress in the same manner? It is true, imagination and her whimsical daughter has created a semblance between the sallow imp of the marshes and the hideous malignant monster of contagion; but those who have taken the trouble to compare all their phœnomenæ will readily see that they are less alike than the head-ach and the tooth-ach.

If we look for the source of the Yellow Fever, (as has been done by some gentlemen more distinguished for the singularity of their opinions than the strength of their arguments) amongst the stagnant water of the street gutters, the ponds and ditches in the suburbs and commons, the dirt and litter of the alleys and lanes, the sinks and sewers of Market street, the sulphur, smelling bilge water of ships, it eludes our search and teaches us to look elsewhere: for the fevers derived from those sources, are never accompanied with mortification of the stomach, gall ducts and black vomiting, or that assemblage of symptoms which create horror in every spectator, and induce him to seek his safety in flight, lest he should be blasted by its contagious influence.

FRENCH ATROCITY.

The following detail will be read by every American with feelings of mingled horror and detestation. The conduct of the French in this instance, has been so abominable—so fiend-like—that we want words to express our boiling indignation. Our only consolation is, that the spirit of our countrymen is awakened, and that similar outrages will seldom occur in future. Our young navy is growing a pace, and spreading its protecting wings over our wide spreading commerce; and ere long, will be able to repel injuries, and avenge insults from whatever quarter they may come.

CURRACOA.

BY this public instrument and protest, be it known and made manifest unto all whom it doth or may concern, That on this 15th day of October, 1798, before me, B. H. Philips, consul of the United States of America at Curracoa, personally came and appeared Thomas Snell, late master of the schooner Amphitrite, of New-York, who being duly sworn on the holy evangelists of Almighty God, DEPOSETH, that he sailed in the said schooner from New-York, on the 12th day of August last, loaded with provisions, bound to the West-Indies; and on the 20th September arrived at Grenada, where he sold part of her cargo; and on the 4th inst. left Grenada with the remaining part of her cargo, bound for Curracoa. That on the 6th inst. at meridian, he saw the island called Roca, it bore by his compass S. E. by E. distant about 6 leagues, when the schooner was hauled to the south and westward, in order to pass between the above named island and the isles of Avis, supposing that there was a current setting strong to windward, from the small progress the vessel made. That on the 7th inst. at half past 12 A. M. he saw the breakers under the lee bow, when the helm was immediately put down to bring the vessel round; but before she came to, and the sails trimmed, she struck on the reef on the north side of the isles of Avis, and there she stuck fast. That the guns were immediately thrown overboard to ease the vessel, and at day-break the boat was put out and sent with the first mate and six people on shore with some provisions.—That the 8th and 9th inst. were occupied in getting provisions on shore for the crew to subsist on; the said island not being inhabited: That on the 11th inst. the weather being moderate, a stage was made, and by its help got on shore the main sail, fore sail, and some light sails—but finding that there was no possibility of saving the vessel and cargo without more assistance, the boat was prepared and fitted in the best manner that circumstances would allow; and on the 13th inst. the deponent with four of the crew, sailed from the island of Avis, for Curracoa, where they arrived the 14th inst. That immediately on their arrival at Curracoa, he this deponent waited on his excellency the governor, and told him his situation, who with great complaisance and apparent friendship, offered him any assistance in his power, & afterwards waited on the said consul to advise with him, who joined in opinion that a vessel should be procured with the utmost dispatch to bring away the people of the said schooner, and what could be saved from the wreck for the benefit of whoever it might concern; and agreeable thereto, he paid a Spanish schooner (the only vessel at that time to be got) called Santa Antonia Abad, Manuel Corson, master, to proceed to the wreck, and there to wait eight days, and then proceed to Curracoa, for which he agreed to pay him 320 dollars, and to insure his vessel, valued at 1050 dollars, at the rate of 5 per cent.

That he sailed from Curracoa in the said vessel so hired, for the Isles of Avis on the 16th instant, taking on her deck the boat in which he and his four people arrived at Curracoa, and that they arrived at the Isles of Avis on the 18th instant. And on the 20th instant came James Conner, sailing master, Levi Bordine, first mate, and Lister Asguith second mate, all late of the said schooner Amphitrite, who having been also severally duly sworn, did confirm the foregoing, so far as relates to the sailing from New-York, and until said Snell left the Isles of Rois.

Afterwards, that is to say, on the 22d instant, came said Thomas Snell and Frederick Bareth. Said Bareth having been duly sworn, deposed that he went with said Thomas Snell to the Isles of Avis, and these acted as interpreter on the following occasion: that on their arrival at the Isles of Avis, they found a privateer under French Colours (but owned as they are informed in Curracoa) called, "Fleur de la Mer," commanded by Pierre d'Pine, lying at anchor.

That the day before their arrival at the Isles of Avis the said Pierre d'Pine had made prisoners of all the people of the Amphitrite, who remained there and had taken possession of all they had got on shore from the wreck, with the vessels log book, journal, &c. and that by order of one of the privateers prize masters, a hut where some of the people lived, was burned with all their clothes.

That the privateer being then under way, said Pierre d'Pine ordered the deponents to come on board the privateer, and bring all the Amphitrite's papers with them. The privateer soon after came to anchor, when the deponents along with capt. Corson went on board, when the said d'Pine demanded the papers. A letter from the governor of Curracoa, and a certificate from the said consul were handed him, both which he treated with great contempt, and told them that he was governor of the Isles of Avis, and that he would take from the wreck of the schooner Amphitrite what he thought proper, and every thing from the shore that he might want which had been saved from the wreck--he had already taken possession of the Amphitrite's boat, and ordered the people to go on board the Spanish schooner with what cloaths they had on; he gave them two barrels of beef, part of four half barrels of flour, and half a barrel of bread. He then demanded to know what was become of all the arms, powder, &c. Captain Snell told him that he did not know, that he believed he had in his possession already all that had been saved from the wreck; to which he replied he had not, and said that the people had hid them under ground, and that if I did not tell him where every article was, he would put him and his people on a sand key, without bread or water, or would carry them to St. Domingo and put them in prison. Capt. Snell replied that he was in his power, and that he might do as he thought proper, that he could not tell him what he did not know; afterwards he told said Snell he might go on board the Spanish schooner if he pleased, which he did, and staid with the people of the Amphitrite.

That on the morning of the 19th instant, a signal was hoisted by the Spanish schooner for the privateer to send a boat on board (they having non of their own) which they did and the deponents went on board the privateer--That previous to their leaving the privateer the saw the Amphitrite's boat with a number of the privateers people rowing for the wreck; and about sundown, they returned loaded with rigging, gunpowder, butter, &c.--That thus finding the determination of the said Pierre d'Pine was to take every thing from the wreck, they asked her permission to sail for Curracoa, which he granted, and ordered his boat battled up to put them on board the spanish schooner; mean time, and while the boat was getting ready, he told them that the Americans were a pack of villains without humanity; and rather than they should save a single thing from the wreck he would set fire to her, burn her up--That soon after they were put on board the Spanish schooner, 7 o'clock. P. M. of the 19th inst. they got under way and the next day, at 3 P. M. they arrived at Curracoa--These deponents thereupon for the reasons above wrtten, do protest, and I the said Consul at their request, do hereby solemnly protest, against the said current, which drove the said schooner out of her course, which caused her to stick on the aforesaid reef, to stick fast and to be wrecked; Against the said French privateers, called Fluer de la Mee, officers and crew for having deprived them of the property saved from the wreck of the Amphitrite and of the wreck also; and against that goverment who has given her a commission to rob and plunder American persons and property; these facts having been done in a time of peace between America and France, and on the Spanish ground; For all losses, costs, hurts, delay, detriments, and damages suffered, or to be suffered, or sustained by reason of the premises, reserving to the said deponents, and to myself, as Consul on the part of the U. States of America, the right to enter all further protests and proceedings as may at any time hereafter be needful, in respect to the premises.

In Testimony of the truth whereof, the said deponents have hereuto subscribed their names.

Thomas Snell,
James Sonner,
(Signed) Levi Bardin,
Lister Asguith,
Frederick Barret

And in faith of the truth whereof, and in testimony, I have hereunto set my hand and seal of office, at Curracoa, this 29th day of October 1798, and in the 23d year of the Independence of the United States of America.

The Gazette.

PHILADELPHIA,

FRIDAY EVENING, DECEMBER 21.

DIED]--Yesterday morning, of the lock-jaw, Mr. ALEXANDER S. M'FARLANE, late of New-York, Printer; a young man whose amiable disposition, and integrity of character, endeared him to all who had the pleasure of his acquaintance.

Mr. BUNELL, merchant, of St. Domingo, is the gentleman, who bears dispatches from General TOUISANT to the Executive of the United States.

communications.

MR. FENNO,

I HAVE perused with the utmost interest and avidity the letter of F. D'Ivernois as published in your Gazette. It abounds with facts and reflections of the first importance to every American--It cannot be too generally or too frequently read--I could wish to see its circulation extended to every corner of the United States, and am surprised, with you, that any American Paper should omit its publication--We there trace, with convincing perspicuity, the shameless, abandoned and bloody treachery of France from step to step, from deception to deception, from official falshood to falshood, from desolation to desolation and from murder to murder--We find the deluded abettors of her nefarious views, laughed to scorn when they have required the justice and favor which had been promised, and which seduced them to desert and betray their country, and treated with distinguished harshness and cruelty--It cannot be doubted that France had deeply entered into the mad project of universal dominion; had resolved to destroy with her arms every opposing power, and swallow up in perfidy and intrigue such as were neutral. Her views then against every neutral nation being the same, being founded in the same dark and damnable policy, it is not perhaps surprising that the means she employed to accomplish her object have been so precisely similar in America, Switzerland and Geneva--We find the same affected cant about liberty and equality; the same pretension of preserving the rights of the people; of protecting the lower and oppressed orders from the tyranny of their rulers; the same solemn pledges and assurances of respecting the rights of neutrality, and the independence of their dear Sister Republic, and the same destroying treachery and ruin, have been practised or attempted in all these places--she has found in these countries as in all others, parties differing in questions of internal government or struggling for rank and pre-eminence, and she has immediately united herself with the most ignorant or most desperate side, has become their open or secret ally, has appropriated their force to her own interests and duped them into the belief that she was espousing their cause and establishing their points, while in fact, she was but making them subservient to her projects, and instrumental in their own ruin. Mr. D'Ivernois seems to impute their success in Switzerland to the infinite address and great popularity of Barthelemy; and to believe that if a more rash minister had been there, the eyes of the government and people would have been opened early enough to have defeated their invaders--How near may we have been to the precipice they have fallen from--The open assumption of power and disregard of our neutral and independent rights--the rash insolence, and insufferable arrogance that were manifested by those wretched politicians, Genet, Fauchet, and Adet may have been our salvation--A Barthlemy, lulling our fears at daily encroachments through real or pretended friendship, or, by the plain dictates of policy, avoiding to excite the alarm which it was his interest to suppress, might perhaps have left us little at this time to boast of, or at least have involved us in serious and lasting scenes of bloodshed and trouble--But the alarm, thank God is excited, and has electerised every American heart--France stands before us, naked, deformed, corrupted and detestable as she is, and the United States beholds with unspeakable contempt every effort which she or her partisans are making or can make to lull us into a false security, to restore her credit among us, or expose us either to her treachery or her arms. AN AMERICAN.

THOUGH present appearances indicate a remission in the fever of reformation, and that modern chivalry is wearing out of fashions, there is still cause for vigilance and exertion. The seeds of contagion are no where intirely eradicated, and another floodtide in the fortune of the French, though at present ebbing apace, would quickly re-invigorate their principles and adherents. The love of change, so natural to poverty and disappointed ambition; the pride of Philosophy, soured to misanthrophy at the disgrace of its favorite systems; the yet unchastised folly of thoughtless benevolence, and of those friends to christianity, who in the triumphs of infidels, find arguments for the truth of the Gospel, and the fulfilment of the prophecies, are auxiliaries, ever ready to support the standard of Gallic reformation. It behoves us therefore to be upon our guard--To frustrate the machinations of the wicked, and to save the weak and superstitious, from the destructive consequences of their supineness and credulity.

In the juggle of the political theatre, a new kind of character seems to have started up amongst us. Those who have too much grace any longer to advocate the French, and at the same time too much bigotry and rancor to allow any merit to the English, have assumed a perfectly neutral station, and sunk into a sort of negative being, designated by the term of true American. These true Americans cannot exclaim with the Roman philanthropist, "Homo sum, nihil humani a me alienum puto." Though formerly all French, they are now wholly American, (dum vitant stulti vitia!) and hold themselves totally detached from every other portion of the human race, in whose affairs they disclaim any connection or concern. The benevolence of your true American, is bounded by the limits of country. With him, there is no world beyond it. Europe is not even his ultima Thulé, and wrapped up in apathy, like the God of Lucretius, à Rebus, sejun ctaque longè,

Nec bene pro meritis capitur, nec tangitur ira.

So long therefore as the French will let us alone, say these gentlemen, we have nothing to do with them, and are in no wise interested in their proceedings. But with all due deference to these soi-disant Americans, I can regard the question which so tremendously agitates the civilized word, in no other light, than whether we (Americans as well as Europeans) shall exchange the manners of the present age, for those which prevailed in Rome, in the most corrupted state of the commonwealth. The design of those who effected the revolution in France, and now take the lead in the affairs of that republic, evidently is, to overthrow the present governments in Europe and to establish democracies in their stead. Connected with this intention, it is their plan and primary object to destroy the Christian Religion, which is intimately interwoven with, and a main support of the existing establishments. This undoubtedly was the motive which carried their arms into Italy, and prompted the demolition of the Papal power. The security of the present usurpers, is an additional and perhaps still stronger reason for their exertions to change the face of Europe; as upon the extension of their principles they must chiefly depend for the preservation of their power, and perhaps of their lives. So long as the monarchial form of government shall be fashionable they have to dread a coalition for the restoration of monarchy in France; but if they succeed in their democratizing scheme, they are at once freed from this danger.

As the French revolution was first set on foot by their literary men, it has been pretty generally countenanced by that class of philosophers in other countries, who have been more conversant with the natural than moral world, and with books than men; and it is observable that in all their operations, much attention has been paid by the propaganda to flattering the propensities of this description of mankind. Hence their affectation of a love for the arts, their adoption of the Roman manners and revival of the Roman names in the countries they have revolutionized. The conquest of Italy, and translation of the great master pieces of sculpture and painting to Paris, as well as the present expedition to Egypt, which is also a sort of classic ground, and the theatre on which Alexander and Cæsar and the other heroes of antiquity had formerly distinguished themselves, were calculated to stimulate the appetite of the literati and *men of talents in every part of the world, and were considerations which were doubtless thrown into the scale, though not perhaps the principal inducement to those undertakings.

But to return to ourselves--He must be a short-sighted statesman indeed, who thinks we could remain unaffected in a general wreck of the European establishments, or that we should not immediately partake of the evils resulting from the prostration of religion and morals which must inevitably ensue. What then are we to think of those politicians, who are laboring to keep alive an enmity to Britain, who as well from the respectability of her constitution (the freedom of which, contrasted with the democratic tyranny of France, may at length ween the minds of the discontented from their extravagant theories) as from her maritime superiority, is the only power capable of rescuing the world from the ruin which menaces it!

* See letter to Mazzei.

IT must afford satisfaction, to the lover of virtue, order and government, to know that JUDGE RUSH is in contemplation as a candidate for the Executive Department, when the term of the present Governor expires. The abilities and character of JUDGE RUSH stand in need of no eulogium. The integrity and independent firmness of his mind--his invariable support of the constitution and laws of his country--his ardent love of justice, and inflexible steadiness in the office of a magistrate--his laudable and distinguished exertions in his judicial station, to impress the observance of moral, social, and religious duty, are well known, and cannot but render him highly acceptable, and unite in his favor, persons of all parties and denominations, who wish to promote the solid interests and prosperity of our country.

It must afford no inconsiderable degree of satisfaction to the friends of the Federal Government, to perceive those measures, the adoption of which were opposed with the most virulence in their operation vindicate themselves. This has been the case precisely in more than one instance, The British treaty, in particular, has given the lie to all the predictions of its antagonists: and every transaction of our government with relation to France, in their success, are daily affording strong demonstrations of the wisdom and foresight of those who originated them. This, if there was any candor in the opposition, would be acknowledged by them, but these men habituated to the disuse of their own sense, (if they have any) resist even the incontrovertible evidence of fact.

Verbal accounts from the West Indies, are but repetitions of eulogiums on the policy of the United States, in suspending their intercourse with those belonging to the French republic. These colonies, as it was predicted, cannot subsist without the American commerce.--Starvation is doing wonderful things--it has already expelled the agents of the republic from the important island of St. Domingo, and will successively revolutionize all French America.

The independence of St. Domingo will afford great temptation to the American merchants: it is however understood, that the propositions of Toussaint only amount to the regulation of a partial trade, to supply the wants of the island, until a regular and permanent government shall be established--In this case, or indeed in every question of this novel affair, it will require much deliberation and caution, before the American government can safely accede to to a principle, which may in the issue involve other important maxims of national policy. But we can in this instance, rely on that wisdom, foresight, and patriotism, which on more critical occasions, have safely conducted us through quicksands and rocks.

UNITED IRISHMEN.

There came last night to my House two ruffians, one of whom lurked about the porch, while the other, as I stood at my own door, struck me on the head with a bludgeon: Amazed at such baseness, and being assaulted wholly unawares, I turned into my Office to seize a stick, instead of pressing on the assailant, whereby I might have promptly punished his audacity. Reflecting on the transaction since, it has occurred to me, that I was fortunate in not closing with him, as his dagger-armed companion would immediately have fallen upon me, and in the scuffle which must have ensued, I should have been murdered. I went after the nocturnal assassin, this morning, to return his domiciliary visit. A woman came forward to say he was not at home.

He will not, however, pass unpunished: But future attacks will be repelled in a different manner; and if these Dagger-Men choose thus to push things to extremities, they will find me better prepared.

JOHN WARD FENNO.

This day, at 12 O'clock, the House of Representatives of this state, waited on the President of the United States, and presented the following

ADDRESS:

To JOHN ADAMS,

PRESIDENT of the UNITED STATES,

SIR,

AT this momentous crisis of our public affairs, the house of Representatives of the State of Pennsylvania, at an early period of their session, beg leave to express the high sense they entertain of your conduct, as Chief Magistrate of the United States, in support of the honor and independence of this country.

We have viewed, with anxious solicitude, the wild projects of dominion, which have been displayed on the theatre of Europe. We have seen, that even that theatre is too small for the unlimited ambition of the rulers of the French people;--that the Atlantic itself gives no bounds to their projects of subjugation; and that the United States of America are threatened. Threatened, Sir, not so much with open hostility--or an immediate and bold division of their territory--as with a division, by means of a dark and insidious policy, of the people from the government of their choice, and from the men on whom the ponderous weight of administration rests.

The vilest arts of political seduction have been triumphantly employed in various governments, and especially in those of republican form. The endearing language of sister has been uttered, in the moment of a deadly embrace. That you, sir, have been constantly aware of the effects of this policy, and have, with an uniform dignity, provided against them and for the public safety, so far as your constitutional powers permitted, must be highly gratifying to the patriotic pride of every independent mind. That in this address we speak the sentiments of the great body of our constituents, as well as our own, warms our hearts in the expression of that important truth. Yet we deplore that there are those, who call themselves by the American name, who have daringly insulted our country, by an usurpation of powers not delegated to them, by an obscure interference in our external concerns. That you have lately noticed this circumstance, is an additional proof of your vigilance for the general welfare.

On this subject it remains for us to say, that as (notwithstanding your liberal policy) negociation has failed, we pledge ourselves in a solemn manner, as far as our constitutional powers extend, to co-operate with the government in averting all foreign influence, and detecting domestic intrigue.

With sincere and earnest wishes for your health; that your care for the public good may continue, and with it, the confidence of the citizens of the United States; the House of Representatives of the State of Pennsylvania have voted this Address.

YEAS.

Messrs. Evans, Speaker; Albright, Brown, Blair, Brooke, Bull, Buckley, Campbell, Dunlap, Erwin, Foster, Fisher, Hannum, Hall, Hemphill, Hendricks, Hopkins, Hostetter, Kelly, Kennedy, Keppele, Keys, Kirk, Krause Miller, M'Pherson, Palmer, Power, Preston, Raum, Ruch, A. Scott, J. Scott, Secke', Stocker, Speer, Steer, Strickler, Taylor, Turner, Watson, Wells, Williamson, Wharton, Wilson, Wright.--46

Messrs. Boileau, Coolbaugh, Conrad, Cunningham, Eyre, Fulmer, Harris, Hartsell, Horn, Huston, Ingles, Leonard, Lyle, Maworter, McDowell, Penrose, Rose, Shoemaker, Snyder, Udree, Weaver, Worrell.--22.

To which the PRESIDENT made the following

REPLY:

To the HOUSE of REPRESENTATIVES of the STATE of PENNSYLVANIA.

GENTLEMEN,

I RECEIVE the honor of this Address from the House of Representatives of the State of Pennsylvania, expressive of their approbation of my conduct, as Chief Magistrate of the United States, in support of the Honor [illegible] with more than common gratitude and peculiar sensibility.

The passion of ambition is in its nature unlimited. The late wild projects suggested by it on the theatre of Europe, are not new. The French nation, from their numbers, their situation, their numbers, their resources, their bravery, activity, ingenuity, and enterprize, have been peculiarly subject to paroxysms of this distemper of the human mind. The spirit of conquest, which has often seized on this people, has however, never taken possession of them without making work for severe repentance--without involving France in extravagant exertions, and expences, both of blood and treasure, which have exhausted it to such a degree, as to require sometimes whole centuries of langour and lassitude before they could recover their true station in the world.

There has not been a sound mind in France which has not always regretted and lamented this foible in his countrymen. Nor do I believe there is a Frenchman in the world at this day, who is really and truly enlightened with the knowledge of the true interest and honor of his country, who does not bewail the infatuation which is producing temporary calamities to other nations, and must prodnce more lasting misfortunes to France.

The insidious and malevolent policy of dividing people and nations from their government is not original: The French have not the credit even of the invention of it. It is borrowed from the great nation of Persia, who were taught it by the little republic of Sparta, after she was debauched and corrupted. France ought to be ashamed of it, and the world ought to make her repent of her servile imitation.

Candor must own that our country lies under a reproach which it concerns the nation to correct: it is that of producing individuals who are capable not only of dark interferences by usurpation in our external concerns, but also capable of forgetting or renouncing their principles, feelings and habits, in a foreign country, and becoming enemies to their own. The disgraceful observation has been made, and with too much appearance of truth, that there are more Americans than there are of any other nation who change their minds when they change their skies. Scandalous and criminal proofs of this are heard and read almost every day. Whether this is owing to a want of national character, or a want of criminal law, a remedy ought to be sought.

The solemn pledge you give to co operate with the general government, in averting all foreign influence and detecting domestic intrigue, is very important to the common welfare of our country, and will give great satisfaction to the Union.

I return, gentlemen, with great pleasure, my sincere and earnest wishes for your health, that your care for the public good may continue, as I doubt not it will, and with it the confidence of the citizens of Pennsylvania in particular, and the union in general.

JOHN ADAMS.

Philadelphia, Dec. 21, 1798.

CONGRESS.

The House of Representatives of the United States were this day employed in discussing the question, whether Wm. Blount should be tried without personally appearing in court, on a proposition made for instructing the Committee of Managers to require the Senate to issue process for compelling the said Wm. Blount to appear.

Valuable Property for Sale.

FOR SALE,

THAT well known Eſtate, called SHREWSBURR FARM, formerly the reſidence of General John Cadwaladar, ſituate on Saſſafras River, in Kent county, Maryland—containing about 1900 acres of prime LAND, upwards of 500 of which are in woods. The Buildings are all excellent, and conſiſt of a handſome Dwelling Houſe, two large Barns with Cow houſes, Stables for fifty horſes, a ſpacious treading floor under cover, a granary, two Overſeer's houſes, two ranges of two ſtory buildings for Negroes (one of them new and of brick), Corn houſes a Smoak houſe, &c. &c.—The whole Eſtate being nearly ſurrounded by water, it requires but little fencing, and has a good Shad and Herring fiſhery. It is conveniently ſituated for both the Philadelphia and Baltimore markets, with two landings on a navigable river but a ſhort ſail from Baltimore. There is a large Peach, and two large Apple Orchards on the premiſes; alſo, a variety of excellent fruits of different kinds. The ſoil is moſtly a rich loam.—The whole will be ſold together or divided into ſmaller farms (for which the buildings are conveniently ſituated) as may ſuit the purchaſer. The Stock on ſaid Farm, conſiſting of Horſes, Cattle, Sheep &c. will alſo be diſpoſed of.—For further particulars apply to GEORGE HASTINGS on the premiſes, or to the ſubſcriber, in Philadelphia.

THIS DAY PUBLISHED,
By WILLIAM YOUNG,
Corner of Cheſnut and Second-ſtreets,
JOAN OF ARC,
AN EPIC POEM,
By Robert Southey; with notes.

"WE do not heſitate to declare our opinion that the poetical powers diſplayed in it are of a very ſuperior kind—Conceptions more lofty and daring, ſentiments more commanding, and language more energetic, will not eaſily be found:—nor does ſcarcely any part of it ſink into languor, as the glow of feelings and genius animates the whole. The language is, for the moſt part, modelled on that of Milton; and not unfrequently, it has a ſtrong reliſh of Shakeſpeare."

Monthly Review, vol. 19, p. 361.

A HISTORY,
OR ANECDOTES OF THE REVOLUTION IN RUSSIA,
IN THE YEAR 1762.
Tranſlated from the French of M. de Rulhiere;
With an elegant Head of the late Empreſs.
[The ſecond edition, price 75 cents,]

"The grounds of M. de Rulhiere's information ſeem indiſputable, and his readers appear to have every reaſon to be ſatisfied with his diſcernment, in unfolding the motives and circumſtances that concurred in bringing about this ſtriking event.

"We ſhall only add, that we have ſeldom met with more intereſting original anecdotes, than thoſe that are contained in the little work which we have now reviewed."
